

ManyOne Surpasses $7 Million in Series A Funding

Internet Media Enterprise Preparing to Launch

SCOTTS VALLEY, Calif. — July 4, 2007 — ManyOne Networks (<http://ManyOne.net>) today announced that it has surpassed $7 million in funding support for the launch of its groundbreaking Internet portal service in the late summer of 2007.

“We are delighted to have crossed this milestone, and we’re very excited about what we’re going to launch. ManyOne will represent a new class of Web publishing, education and communications platform,” said Joe Firmage, Chairman and CEO of ManyOne Networks.

Details and a beta version of the new service will be unveiled in September.

ManyOne is a company with an ethical compass. An integral facet of its business plan is that it will become wholly owned by the international nonprofit, the ManyOne Foundation, in 2008. The Foundation’s Board of Directors will include Jane Goodall, Paul Hawken, Muhammad Yunus and other social leaders and scientists worldwide, and will ensure that the assets and activities of ManyOne Networks, along with profits paid out to the Foundation, go to advancing the greater public good.

About ManyOne Networks

ManyOne will enable people and organizations to create a new, socially responsible network of Web portals. ManyOne and its partners are pioneering a new Web platform for people to create their own professionally managed Web sites, learn about our world through others’ sites, and experience others’ arts. ManyOne’s vision is to fulfill the original potential of the Internet as an open, democratic medium that inspires creativity, communication, collaboration and education, and is preparing to launch a financial system that supports its community.

For more information about ManyOne Networks, visit www.manyone.net.

About The ManyOne Foundation

The ManyOne Foundation will become the owner of ManyOne Networks in 2008, and is guided by the Earth Charter, a roadmap of principles for realizing a just and sustainable world. Its Board of Directors, which is currently in formation, will eventually comprise 30-40 prominent social leaders and scientists from around the world. Among others, individuals presently committed to join the Board include:

- Mahnaz Afkhami, Founder and President of Women's Learning Partnership (WLP), former Minister of State for Women's Affairs in Iran, and a leading advocate of women's rights for more than three decades
- Jane Goodall, anthropologist, conservationist and founder of the Jane Goodall Institute
- Khadija Haq, President of Mahbub ul Haq Human Development Centre and a leader on issues of economic and social development and women's empowerment
- Paul Hawken, environmentalist, educator, entrepreneur, journalist and best-selling author

- Hazel Henderson, world-renowned authority on sustainable economics
- Ashok Khosla, social entrepreneur, environmental visionary, and 2002 winner of the prestigious UNEP Sasakawa Environment Prize
- Richard Perl, a founder of the Social Venture Network and the Threshold Foundation
- Hans Schoepflin, entrepreneur and philanthropist
- Maurice Strong, former Senior Advisor to the Secretary-General of the United Nations and to the President of the World Bank
- Jonah Wittkamper, biologist, technologist and organizer of the world's youth community
- Muhammad Yunus, winner of the Nobel Peace Prize, founder of the Grameen Bank, which launched the worldwide micro-credit movement

#

Press Contact:
Bruce Lewis
ManyOne Networks
435-602-9942